

The International Programs Center of the US Census Bureau has immediate openings for qualified individuals in the areas of demography, sociology, related social sciences, and computer systems. We are looking for well-qualified persons at the MA and Ph.D. levels, especially those with training in demography, quantitative data analysis of large datasets, and sociology/social research. Successful candidates will be offered immediate two year appointments in our division between now and October, 2003. Qualified applicants must be US citizens with at least 15 semester hours of mathematics and statistics, six of which must be in statistics. They must also possess language capability (preferably Russian), and some familiarity with Eastern Europe and the states of the Former Soviet Union. These openings provide qualified applicants an opportunity to work on one or more of the following topics: Social and Demographic Characteristics, Population Estimates and Projections, and International Assistance and Training Programs. This is an exciting time for the International Programs Center, and we look forward to sharing our opportunities. These positions are open now and will remain so until the vacancies are filled.

For application instructions, see: <http://www.census.gov/hrd/www/vacancy/stat2.htm> or contact the Census Bureau's Recruitment Office at 1.800.638.6719.

For specific questions about opportunities in the International Programs Center, please contact:

Dr. Marc Rubin, Chief

Eurasia Branch

International Programs Center

Population Division

US Census Bureau

Washington, DC 20233-8860

phone: 301. 457.1362

E-mail: marc.rubin@census.gov.

For more general questions, contact:

Stephanie J. Meako

Staffing Specialist

Human Resources Division

US Census Bureau

Washington, DC 20233-8800

FAX: 301.457.4575

E-mail: stephanie.j.meako@census.gov